debut of J. Bentley Seymour was respon-sible for the awful disaster that overtook the Glants. A full report of the details would prove tiresome, as all bases on balls look alike. A planes of the details would prove tiresome, as all bases on balls look alike. A planes of the details look alike. A planes of the country of the details look alike. look alike. A glance at the table of contents below tells the story.

J. Bentley entered the arena full of hope and confidence and scrambled eggs. He knew that Mr. Doheny had walloped some National League teams, and the Albany boy counted on doing the same. But alas for Mr. Seymour! He lost his control, and then injured his head while trying to think. In the sixth round the wretched youth went up in a balloon, so to speak and could not have pushed a pawnbroker's sign across

Then Rusie's uniform came to the rescue again, but Mr. Seymour had left Mr. Campfield a legacy in the shape of a Chicago sprinter on each base. With the affairs of the Glants in this interesting condition, Mr. Lange rammed out a home run, and there Sunday Baltimore beat Chicago thir-

On Sunday Baltimore beat Chicago thirteen to one. The question now agitating the Giants is, "What will the Orloles do to us?" Heaven only knows!

Young Seymour dashed forth like a winner. The crowd encouraged him, and said he was a comer. In five innings the Colts made four hirs, and Bentley gave out but four bases on balls. He managed to hit four bases on balls, the managed to hit four bases on balls, the managed to hit he team, and Flynn was standing with his edge exposed at the time. Still, Bentley was all right until the sixth when, with two men out and Kittridge on third, Harry Davis missed a grounder from the bat of William Everett.
